Navarino has announced that its founders Dimitris and Panos Tsikopoulos have entered into an agreement with ICG's European Corporate team to support the next stage of the company's growth.

Navarino has established itself over the past 25 years as a trusted partner to vessel owners and managers worldwide, delivering a comprehensive suite of critical technology, connectivity, and cybersecurity services. The company's consistent growth and commitment to innovation have positioned it as a market leader.

As part of the transaction, Navarino's founders will reinvest in the business, while existing investor Viasat will exit. ICG will collaborate closely with Dimitris and Panos Tsikopoulos, who will retain control of the company, providing a bespoke financing solution to support their long-term strategic objectives.

Dimitris and Panos Tsikopoulos at Navarino, commented 'We are delighted to join forces with ICG at an important inflection point for Navarino and the broader maritime industry. Our focus remains on enhancing the quality and breadth of the products and services that we deliver to our clients. Aquarius BulkCarrier Shipping Enhances Fleet Connectivity and Cyber Security with Navarino

Aquarius Bulk Carrier Shipping, an Athens-based shipping company operating a fleet of ten modern bulk carriers, has selected Navarino to upgrade and future-proof its digital infrastructure across all vessels.

With a strong commitment to operational efficiency, safety, and crew welfare, Aquarius has partnered with Navarino to deploy a comprehensive suite of high-performance connectivity, IT, and cyber security solutions.

A Hybrid Connectivity Ecosystem

To ensure uninterrupted global communications, Aquarius has adopted a hybrid connectivity setup combining Starlink and Ku-band VSAT services, the latter using Intellian viQ00NX antennas.

This robust, high-bandwidth connectivity, featuring a dual-layer approach, ensures that vessels maintain reliable connectivity regardless of trade route, weather conditions, or demand, delivering a stable digital backbone that supports the company's evolving operational needs. On top of these benefits, the upgrade to crew welfare from having high-speed, low-latency bandwidth via Starlink has been very significant. As a company that treats the welfare of its seafarers as a top priority, this was a key consideration in helping crews stay connected with loved ones and to provide them with an online environment similar to the one they have on land.

Navarino launches collaboration with the Hellenic Lighthouse Service to provide free Starlink systems

In October, Tasos Barbas, Head of Corporate Responsibility at Navarino, and the company's "Green Ambassador", Alkis Temperidis, visited the Lighthouse Service headquarters in Piraeus, where they met with the Director.

They also met with the Lighthouses Captain, Stathis Pappas. The Navarino representatives brought with them the first Starlink terminal, which was installed at the Service's offices and is already being used by the administrative staff of the company. This marks the beginning of a long-term collaboration between Navarino and the Lighthouse Service to provide free Starlink systems to all lighthouses in Greece.
